EXPENSIVE "GETTING EVEN."

Champ Clark was hardly playing the broad-minded statesman when, in his rather acrimonious discussion of the president's attitude toward tariff legislation, he threatened to cut off the source of supplies by which the President's tariff policy is maintained.

That may appear to one in a rather excited state of mind to be "getting even" with Mr. Taft, but in reality it is doing an injury to the public service and the American people who have arrived at that stage of political development where they want the tariff taken out of politics and its occasional revision conducted under the advice and counsel of a scientific board in permanent commission and daily study of the question from a non-partisan viewpoint. To upset the President's first move toward the attainment of this much to be desired public benefit just because of a political quarrel with him, is simply cutting off one's nose to spite one's face, and in cooler moods, Mr. Clark is too big a man to do such things.—St.

Albans Messenger.
